TWO MEN ARE SHOT

In a Riot Over the Lectures of Ex-Priest Slattery.

HE CREATES A RIOT AT KEOKUK

Resulting in the Firing of a Revolver Into the Crowd—Angry and Turbulent Scenes Enacted in a Hall.

KEOKUK, Ia., June 8.—A small-sized riot occurred in this city last night, during which two men were wounded, one slightly and the other seriously. Several days ago the town was covered with the announcements of a proposed series of lectures against Romanism, to be delivered by the Rev. Joseph Slattery of Boston, claiming to be an ex-priest, and by a woman who, it was claimed, had been a nun. These announcements caused great excitement and intense indignation among the Roman Catholics of this city, all of whom maintained that the couple were not allowed to speak. The agent for the couple secured the Grand Army hall for their use. Several ineffectual attempts were made to deprive them of the use of this hall. The trustees were waited upon by several committees, but to all requests gave a decided refusal to speak. The agents with the Slattery. It is alleged that one member of the post even went so far as to say that the couple should have the use of the hall and of the muskets also. Failing in their attempts to prevent the Slattery from having the use of the hall, a move was made upon Mayor Craig. It was represented to him that the appearance of the Slattery upon the lecture platform would cause a riot and he was asked to do all in his power to prevent the speaking. The trustees refused to issue a license for the lectures. The business manager for the Slattery waited upon the mayor and tried to induce that official to issue an order that the license be granted. This Mayor Craig refused to do, informing the agent that if he appeared at the Slattery would not be allowed to speak in Keokuk.

Slattery Supporters Rally.
When this was made public supporters of the Slattery said they should speak, and at once set about arranging for a free lecture. Handbills were distributed announcing this fact. Long before the hour arrived for opening the doors Main street in front of the Etes house, on which the Grand Army hall is located, was filled with people who were to all appearances, only there from motives of curiosity. The crowd was increased steadily until it appeared as if all the people in the city were on the ground. When the doors were opened there was a rush which all the efforts of the police could not stay. When the entrance to the hall was gained a man was found at the door who had appeared to be to prevent all whom he suspected of being Roman Catholics from gaining admission. The crowd pushed by him and the man, becoming excited, cried for help. Men who had been admitted to the hall before the opening of the doors for the public came rushing forward with loaded muskets in their hands, while others with revolvers climbed upon chairs and ordered the mob to keep back.

Shot in the Legs.
Excited individual shouted that Slattery would not be allowed to talk, while the frenzied men in whose hands were loaded weapons said that he would talk. Just then, according to the best information obtainable, a row occurred in the rear of the hall. During this progress and while the police were attempting to clear the hall a shot was fired and two men were seen to fall. A rush for the exits ensued, and the hall was quickly cleared. Then it was discovered that the injured men were Patrick Harrington and Thomas Glenn. Both were hit in the legs, the former having a bad flesh wound in the knee cap, while Glenn was shot in the left leg of the right leg. Just how the shooting occurred is not known now, but it is thought that it was done by a man in the crowd. Persons who were in the immediate vicinity of Effner say that he had a musket and someone attempted to take it away from him and that during the struggle for its possession the weapon was discharged with the result above stated. The injured were at once cared for by surgeons whose offices were in the building and then removed to their homes. Following the shooting Sheriff Kerr notified the Slattery that they would not be allowed to speak, and appointing a number of persons to escort them in charge of the hall and of the people who had come to the defense of the lecturers. Outside the crowd was howling for Slattery and the man supposed to have done the shooting, and threats of lynching were freely indulged in. The injured men were entirely inadequate for such an emergency, and all that could be done was to keep the crowd under restraint.

Ropes Called For.
Efforts to disperse the infuriated people were unavailing. When Glenn was carried out upon a stretcher calls were made for ropes with which to hang those supposed to have been responsible for his injury and promptly responded to. About this time one of the local priests, Fr. O'Reilly, a man whom all the people venerate and respect, put in an appearance and exerting among the crowd his presence had the effect of subduing the excitement to some extent and gradually the crowd dispersed, but it was not until a late hour that all had gone to their homes. While these scenes were being enacted outside the crowd his presence to get Slattery and his wife and the men whom the crowd thought had maimed Glenn for his life away in safety. This was finally accomplished, the Slattery being placed in a hack and driven across the bridge while J. A. Collins was secretly taken to his home. Soon after the shooting warrants were issued for the arrest of John Effner and J. A. Collins, the former being charged with the shooting of Glenn and the latter with that of the leg. It is also said that warrants were issued for the arrest of the Slattery on a charge of inciting riot. Effner is said to be a member of the Grand Army. Collins is one of the best known and most prominent men in Keokuk, being interested in many local enterprises and also the secretary of the local loan and building associations. It is almost certain that both men were shot and a physician who attended both men stated to a correspondent that both wounds were caused by one ball.

CRIMES JUSTIFY LYNCHING.
A Sensational Utterance by the Governor of South Carolina.
RANKIN, S. C., June 8.—Under the grove of trees where eight negroes were brought from the county jail in December, two years ago, and lynched and killed with bullets, Governor Tillman made the sensational utterance at the first meeting of the democratic state campaign yesterday. "There is only one crime that should bring on lynching," he said, "I, as governor, would head a party to lynch any negro that would criminally assault a white woman." The remark caused a profound sensation, and it is said on all sides that the governor has condemned himself out of his mouth more than all the speeches of his opponents here today. In his speech the governor uncorked several new vials. He made the counter charge as to his running the state's credit on Wall street and the money centers that this was the cry of South Carolina newspapers owned by banks in the attempt to poison the minds of northern capitalists for the purpose of depressing state bonds owned by widows and orphans, so that they could speculate on them next summer. It was a pure scheme of robbery, and the banks, he charged, were in collusion with them.

Holloman, proprietress of "Hotel Holloman," Apex, N. C.—"My son Harvey had scrofula from the time he was three years old until he was seven. He had the best doctors that the country afforded, yet he was given up to die, several times. Some one recommended Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking five bottles he was well enough to get about, and has remained so ever since. I am now enjoying good health."

Find a remedy for scrofula—something that purifies the blood, and acts as a tonic. That, if it's taken in time, will cure Consumption, which is only lung scrofula.
